THE Finance Committee faithfully reflected public opinion when they expressed their regret at the reduction of the aff restation vote by $2,000. Never has the money spent on any public work been less regretted than that spent on the afforestation of the island. The plantations which have sprung up all over the face of the hills during the last few years have added immeasurably to the beauty of the place and have improved its hygiene, We have beard the objection raised that the decaying of the fallen leaves is likely to give rise to malarious exhalations, but it seems impossible to imagine that pine needles, which dry so rapidly, should have any ill effect in this way. Jungly undergrowth so doubt might prove unhealthy, but we believe regetation of this i kind does not flourish in conjunction with Government of Ireland is the formation of four pine forests, and what there may be of it national councils to represent the provinces. will no doubt be kept in check by th Department concerned, especially in the neighbourhood of habitations. During the last two or three months fever has been very prevalent in the colony, but it has been confined to districts which have not yet been very nearly approached by the plantations, so that in the present case the latter cannot be pitched upon as the cause, while on the other hand houses close to the plantations have wholly escaped the prevailing sickness. The bogey of malaria from decaying vegetation may therefore be dismissed, more especially as the thinning of the plantations which regularly takes place must necessarily keep down what little growth of unhealthy ton river. The Gerd's left Canton at 4 s.m. scrub might otherwise take place. That the plantations have reduced the mean temperature of the city we think there can be little doubt. Old residents are unanimous in the assertion that the heat now is nothing like had a heavy list to starboard, and blocked the do so so unbearable as it used to be in channel so that the Honam could not pass her the old days; and the only feasible ex- until the tide rose and shifted her somewhat at to go to the Opium Farmer for a licence, and trees. Considerations of health, therefore, ought to lead the Government to press forward the completion of the afforeststion of the island with all reasonable despatch, and even if we consider appearance alone the colony is not so poor that it needs to scrimp the work of clothing the barren billsides with a covering of trees. Who was responsible for this cutting down of the efforestation vote in the first instance we do not know, but it must have been some

The Acting Governor held out a hope at the last Council meeting that the increase of the vote might be taken into consideration during the course of the year. The public, we are sure, will be disappointed if this hope is not fulfilled.

blackguards. Some curious indictments were preferred against the Irish members of Parliament, at a Hongkong Gas Company's Shares-$130 per meeting of the Irish Industrial League in Dublin recently. They were denounced for not Hongkong Hotel Company's Shares-$185 per wearing Irish-made hats and boots, and one with West-ond hats and not an Irish hat on the | r per share. ed that eighty-six Irish members should each buy a pair of Irish boots. Only two of then, Hongkong Ice Company's Shares-$40 per Mr. Sexton and Mr. Cox, had ordered Irish books, and in their case they forgot to send the messare so that they could not be made. The mer pers vers defended by a man who declared that though some of the Parnellites might wear London clothes, it certainly was not true of all or the bulk of them. It was further stated that London clothes had been sent by Irish members Selanger Tin-Mining Company 35 per share, MONOPOLE RED SEAL (medium dry). to be altered in Dublin; and also that Mr. Michael Davitt wore Irish made clothes.

A correspondent writes :- A paragraph in the Pall Mull Gasette informs us that Lord Carnervon was recently reported to have said that in these days clergymen were expected to have the wisdom of a "journeyman tailor," whereas the concluding words employed by his lordship were "Jeremy Taylor." A few years ago there was an animated debate in the Chapter-house of Wells Cathedral on the them vexed vestments question. The late dean was one of the speakers. and his quietly humorous manner made light of some of the arguments advanced by ultra-Protestant speakers. "So far as I am personally concerned," said the very reverned gentleman, "if some one should feel disposed to make me a present of a cope with decent sleeves. I shall have no objection to wear it in the cathedral." Next morning the dean was reported in one of your metropolitan contemporaries as having intimated his willingness to conduct divine service in "a coat with a dozen eleeves."

A remarkable wedding took place at St Mande, near Paris, the other day. The bride was Mdile. Maris Pezon, the daughter of Baptiste Pezon, the famous lion tamer; and the bridegroom, Alexandre Pezon, her consin, also a tamer. Abanquet of 100 covers was given by. the father of the bride, to which the Paris press were invited. The company included lion tamors, menagerie directors, atrolling players, and others whose rocation is to furnish amusement at fairs. According to the menu handed round, the wedding fare consisted of " potage de lézard, saucisson de lion, bombes siberionnes, elephant roti, poulets à la léopard," and such dishes. The guests, however, believe that they partock of nothing but good roast beef, ducks, and the like. The banqueting hall was adorned with stuffed lions and similar trophies. Above the bridal pair was a group of superb tigers. A good round sum as dowry was handed by the bride's father. to his son-in-law. The festivities closed with the w, 13

Prince Napoleon and his wife and sister, the Frincess Mathilde, form a happy family at his | 18 place on Lake Leman, which is called La Ber- 17 m11 48 3 11 m 5 39 gerie-s name suggestive of shepherds and shepherdesses. It ought to belong to a Colin and Colotte. The Princess Olotilds and her ro. 18 daughter occupy the right wing, the Princess Mathilde and her secretary the left wing, and the Pretender, round whom they rally, the centre. Plon Plon does not mind being in exile and has the frankness to say so. He was brought up, in a kind of high-class vagabondage-one week at Florence, another a Rome, another at Arenenberg, and another af Stuttgardt, with, relatively to himself, wealthy kinsfolk; and after he was set up by his cousin at the Palais Royal he was nearly always on his travels in order to avoid getting in the Empress Engénie's way. When he was at the Rue de Phalaburg, his household was in a nutshell, and, so far as home associations went, he might as well have been en garaie. Her Imperial Highness contracted for his table with the majordome. When some great personage, who was only traversing Paris, dropped in and was invited to take pot-luck, this majordomo went to a fair neighbour-Marie Colombier-and got her to oblige her illustrious neighbour by seading down her own dinner, which was always a capital one. It's only in Paris that such things could happen. I could imagine life at La Bergerie, with such an austere moralist as the Princess Clotilde, being rather dull, after the Rue Phalsburg. What in the world could sheso narrow in her experience of life, and he so much the contrary-possible talk about in the long sad, antumnal evenings, when mists arising from the lake and coming down from the hills enwr La Eergerie? They have not the resource of a fractions baby.

THE JEWS IN RUSSIA. A correspondent of the Jewish Chronicle writes from Elisabethgrad, under date of August 22:-The let of the Jews in this for this system, it is never difficult to find Almost every day brings with it new laws. which greatly dishearten us. Having cut down the number of students at the Universities, and the percentage of Jows in some of the professions, the Jews are now being excluded from employment on railways : the Government has also reduced the proportion of Jewish physicians in the army to 5 per cent. Though these men have served their country loyally and faithfully, they are now to be cast adrift. Again, it has been decided that no Jew has the right to fix his residence in any village of our ghetto-for so the Jewish area of settlement may be aptly terined where a poor working man can earn a scanty subsistence. Such Jews as have been settled in these villages for many years are not permitted to return if they should temporarily quit their homes even for a few days only, say, for instance, they proceed to a neighbouring town on the High Festivals in order to take part in the synagogue services. the extreme south.
